If you're seeking a refund on Gemini, it's important to understand how their refund process works. Gemini is a cryptocurrency exchange, and like most exchanges, it operates under specific policies that limit refunds due to the irreversible nature of blockchain transactions.

In general, Gemini does not issue refunds for completed crypto trades or transactions sent to the wrong address. Once a crypto transaction is confirmed on the blockchain, it cannot be reversed. However, refunds may be possible in certain scenarios—such as duplicate deposits, incorrect fiat deposits, or failed transactions due to technical errors on Gemini's end.

To request a refund, you should contact Gemini Support through the official Support Center. Provide clear details, including transaction IDs, dates, amounts, and screenshot if possible. Gemini's support team will investigate and determine whether a refund is applicable.

Refunds, if approved, are usually processed in the original payment method. Processing times can vary depending on the payment type—bank wires or card refunds may take several business days.

To avoid refund issues, always double-check wallet addresses, transaction details, and follow Gemini's deposit instructions carefully.
